Dear participant,

It is a great pleasure to welcome you to the heart of European democracy. The European Youth Event (EYE) 2018 is all about you. It is the European Parliament's event where young people take centre stage. We believe that your ideas, thoughts and debates are pivotal to the future of the European Union. They will be harvested with great care during this extraordinary event. At the heart of the EYE is stimulation, innovation and interaction. Europe needs fresh ideas now more than ever. The European elections take place in May 2019 against a backdrop of renewed economic growth, yet youth unemployment remains stubbornly high. Only with real engagement by Europe's citizens, but especially by young people who we believe so much in, can the EU surmount the challenges of the changing economy, migration and climate change.

The five themes of the European Youth Event are astutely selected:

- 1) YOUNG AND OLD: Keeping up with the digital revolution. Digital skills are required for so many jobs on the labour market. Although young people already possess great digital skills, Europe is investing heavily to create a single digital market and ensure that high-speed internet is available for all, leaving no one behind due to a lack of training.
- 2) RICH AND POOR: Calling for a fair share. Your fresh ideas on how to ensure that the world's scarce resources are more fairly distributed across Europe's single market are needed more than ever. If we want globalisation to bring benefits to all we need to make democratic choices to ensure social justice. Europe is a diverse continent and great economic disparities still remain.
- 3) APART AND TOGETHER: Working out for a stronger Europe. The European Union is undoubtedly a champion of peace and prosperity - we have a proud history and a great future ahead of us. However, Europe does not always speak with one voice. Are we punching below our weight? – Should we not be more ambitious?
- 4) SAFE AND DANGEROUS: Staying alive in turbulent times. One of the greatest responsibilities for any government is to keep its citizens safe. European values have not been undermined by terrorist attacks, they have brought us closer together. However, the threat is evolving, from bombs to cyber-attacks, Europe's defences are facing brand new challenges and finding innovative solutions is fundamental.
- 5) LOCAL AND GLOBAL: Protecting our planet. Young people will inherit our precious planet and Europe has been at the forefront of tackling climate for decades. The Paris Agreement is the foundation for protecting Earth, but some are ignoring the voices of scientists. This is the time to step up our efforts - there is a strong sense of urgency to fight the risk of climate collapse for the next generation.

On behalf of the European Parliament, it is a great honour to welcome each and every one of you to Strasbourg. I know that for many of you this may be your first time in our building, which is your home, the beating heart of European democracy. I believe that the European Youth Event 2018 represents only the beginning of our journey together, so please enjoy this event and I am confident that this event will be fulfilling, planting the seeds of many lasting ideas and where many lasting friendships are made.

Mr Antonio Tajani,
President of the European Parliament

Dear participants,

Thank you for accepting the European Parliament's invitation to participate in this third edition of the European Youth Event (EYE).

The EYE 2018 brings together young people from the 28 EU Member States and beyond in the European Parliament. It will be a unique opportunity for you to engage in workshops, debates and many activities with your peers and with decision-makers. We want to listen to YOU! Your ideas will serve as a source of inspiration for Members of the European Parliament and will be discussed in several parliamentary committees in the autumn.

The EYE 2018 aims to:

- give you the opportunity to present and discuss ideas on how to make a change in Europe with fellow participants and with European decision-makers;
- encourage discussion and debate on hot topics and future European policies;
- give you an opportunity to stage cultural performances and showcase cultural diversity in Europe.

On behalf of the European Parliament, we would like to thank our EYE partners and all youth groups contributing to the event.

You are all invited to get involved in the many indoor and outdoor activities during the EYE 2018.

We are looking forward to meeting you in Strasbourg.

Mr Ramón Luis Valcarcel Siso and Mrs Sylvie Guillaume,
Vice-Presidents for Information Policy, Press and Citizens Relations

Dear Young Europeans,

I am very happy to welcome you to the seat of the European Parliament for an exciting weekend of ideas, debate and encounters in this third edition of the European Youth Event.

The European Parliament organises the event with the help of 11 partners, notably the European Youth Forum, to help ensure that the EYE is not only an event for young people, but also organised with and by young people. More than half of the 300 activities offered during the event are proposed and organised by youth groups and youth organisations. By you.

The EYE is a unique event. It brings together young people from all backgrounds and from right across the European Union. Politicians, scientists, artists, entrepreneurs, academics and other experts have come here to join in your discussions. They are however not here to tell you what you should do or what should be done for the future of Europe, nor to showcase what they are doing, but they are here to listen to your ideas and concerns, and take them on board.

The ideas that you will develop these days, the most impactful and well formulated of them, will become part of the EYE2018 Report, which will be published after the event and distributed to all Members of the European Parliament in September 2018. Moreover, within the European Youth Hearings taking place in autumn 2018, some of you will be selected to present these ideas in front of several parliamentary committees.

Your participation in the political, social and civic life is an essential element of citizenship in a democratic Europe. You can be the strongest force in shaping the future of Europe with your ideas, but also with your actions. You can be the strongest force in creating communities, by engaging with and supporting others, by becoming role models for their own participation. Together we can keep reaching out and encourage everyone to get involved, the ones who are less active, as well as the ones who are remote, isolated or at risk of exclusion. In challenging times, it's important to do more and to do better to bring everyone around the table where the ideas are discussed and where the decisions are made.

One year before the European elections, Europe needs your participation, your energy and enthusiasm more than ever, but it also needs your creativity and your innovation. The future of the EU belongs to you, the young generation. This weekend, you start your journey towards creating it. I say your journey because the EYE, just like participation, is not a one-off event, but a process. It is about creating and maintaining a dialogue.

I wish you all a successful and enjoyable weekend!

Klaus Welle,
Secretary-General of the European Parliament

THE EYE FOLLOW-UP

The European Youth Event 2018 is a chance for young people to develop and present their ideas for a better Europe. But it's a lot more than just a two day long event: the EYE is a process, an ongoing discussion between the European Parliament and young people across the continent.

To get the ball rolling following the event, the EYE team has gathered a team of ten young reporters, who will be collecting the 100 best ideas by youth participants and turn them into the EYE2018 Report.

As they said: "We believe that the EYE2018 should result in real change and the contributions of young people at the event are heard by policy makers and politicians throughout Europe. The reporting team will be present at the event and take it all in, to give a voice to young people from all around Europe." Recruited by one of the official EYE Partners, the European Youth Press, they will give the EYE participants, who are from each and every corner of Europe, a voice after the EYE has come to an end.

The EYE2018 report will represent ideas collected from participants at debates, workshops, idea labs, as well as on social media and through interviews. It will be handed to each of the 751 Members of the European Parliament this September. This will be the basis for the coming Youth Hearings, which will be held by a number of parliamentary committees in autumn 2018. The young people with the most interesting contributions from the EYE2018 will be invited to these Youth Hearings, to discuss and debate their ideas once more with Members of the relevant parliamentary committees.

ACTIVITY FORMATS

The EYE offers a wide variety of activities. Some of them needed to be booked in advance, while others are accessible without previous booking. These will be carried out in the following formats:

- Debate: Speakers address a controversial issue from opposing points of view and challenge participants with clear pros and cons.
- Discussion: Speakers tackle complex subjects and shed light on many viewpoints and angles rather than just on two opposing positions regarding a topic.
- Hearing: Experts or young people affected by the subject present their cases or arguments from different angles and then have a discussion with participants.
- Ideas check: Young people present their ideas and proposals, and Members of the European Parliament respond. Quick exchange ping-pong format related to a pressing issue.
- Ideas lab: Participants take the role of young advisors to a Member of the European Parliament concerning a project for future legislation. They propose ideas for change and solutions. Work starts online several weeks before the event, and concludes during the EYE.
- Key note: High-level speakers present and explain a concept of key importance for the future of Europe.
- Talk: In an informal ambience, speakers share personal stories, views, experiences and ideas.
- Workshop: Interactive, hands-on activity in small groups.

Battle of ideas: Playful competition between ideas and approaches linked to the EYE themes. Information and entertainment expressed in various forms:

- Poetry slam: Young slammers among the participants present their original poetry and a jury from the audience votes for the most impactful slam.
- Speed debate: Two groups confront each other with opposite positions on a series of topics, presenting their own position and responding to the others' points. The audience actively participates and votes on the group who managed to change their original opinion.
- Political comedy: Comedians will make you think and laugh about current issues, funny situations and stereotypes.
- Rap battle: Two rap gangs battle against each other's ideas with the weapon of music. The audience votes for its favourite rapper.
- Science slam: Young researchers present their findings in a concise, clear and entertaining way. The audience votes for the most talented future scientist.

 Yo!Fest: These activities will be taking place at Yo!Fest Village outside the European Parliament, organised by the European Youth Forum.

 Hemicycle: These activities will be taking place in the Hemicycle of the European Parliament.

 Webstreamed: These activities will be Webstreamed live.

Open your EYES! Open-air cinema on the river banks

On the occasion of the EYE2018, the City of Strasbourg invites you to discover, or rediscover, the musical comedy 'La La Land'. In the heart of Los Angeles, a young actress, Mia, works as a waitress in a cafe between auditions. And Sebastian, devoted to jazz, plays the piano at run down clubs to keep himself afloat. The two of them are so very far from the dream lives they wish for... Fate will reunite the two dreamers, but will their blossoming relationship be able to resist all of the temptations of the crazy Hollywood life? An American film by the 33 years old French director Damien Chazelle, with Ryan Gosling and Emma Stone. Before the film projection, you can participate at our bal sauvage and dance to the sounds of European music!

It's my body, is it?

Being able to make decisions about health, body and sexual life without fear or discrimination is a basic human right. Yet all over the world, people are judged, discriminated against and arrested, simply for making choices about their bodies. From banning abortions to restricting their use among minors to letting parents decide whether or not their intersex children should get irreversible gender-altering surgery. Do young Europeans have a right over their own bodies? Is the principle that a body is sovereign to itself is valid in Europe? Join this discussion that spans from disability and reproductive rights to the LGBT+ and feminist movement.

How to combat and campaign on online abuse and harassment

Online abuse and harassment of women is a global problem and a particular problem for politically active women. This should not be seen as a normal occurrence, but a 'glitch' we have to fix. This 'glitch' in the online world is an increasing threat to democracy, human rights, safety and wellbeing. As the online and offline worlds become more fluid and we gradually move political participation online, how can we ensure everyone can fully engage and express opinions? How can we mobilise and build a movement of campaigners? How can we set a good standard within our own sphere of influence and lobby social media companies and decision-makers to commit to creating a safer internet? Join us for an interactive guide to campaigning against online abuse.

Impact journalism: Let's talk about solutions

In a political and social context that is both tense and disillusioned, at a time when pessimism and despair seem to be everywhere, Europeans are demanding solutions. Are you tired of hearing about problems without any discussion of how to respond to those problems? Would you like to learn how to build a more constructive and positive narrative? Impact journalism is a way to bring more solutions to light and to get people inspired to act. Learn more in this practical workshop that will challenge you to think about some of the biggest challenges of our time in a constructive and creative way.

WIC open battle space

Battle of ideas: Love versus money

What's behind our decisions, what drives our actions: Money or love, competition or solidarity, prosperity or equality? Young people debate controversial topics. Two groups of debaters from the International Debate Education Association (IDEA) confront each other with opposite positions on a series of topics, presenting their own position and responding to the others' points. The audience actively participates and votes on the group who managed to change their original opinion.

Beyond the walls

At school, it's easy: we know where the pitfalls are... Protected by adults – teachers and parents – we have everything we want. However, we will soon be kicked out into another world, governed by different rules. How will we live in this world?? Which stars will show us the way? These are some of the questions that we ask ourselves at this age. Will you help us find answers?

Borderscapes

The year is 2037. Europe has become a maximum security zone, its citizens protected from a threatening world outside – and even leaving has become a challenge. Five refugees, desperately trying to flee the continent, meet princess Europa and her bull. Is it really explosives they're carrying around in their suitcase?

Battle 4 Your Vote: A political rap battle

Four teams – each composed of two Members of the European Parliament (MEPs) from the same political party and a professional freestyle hip hop artist – duel on topics relevant to Europe today. During the freestyle hip hop battle, teams compete by rapping with music on a given topic, effectively debating the other team, head to head. Participants of the EYE will be invited to submit topics for the battle in advance. The exact topics will be announced at the start of each battle. MEPs will then brief their rapper on their position on the subject. Come and decide who wins and who loses with your applause!

Anxiety: Are we being manipulated?

We are constantly bombarded with images of radical acts and news of terrorism. Even if we can't always grasp what we see in the media, anxiety is all around us. Is what we see real or manipulated? Three dancers and a singer will lead us into a world floating on the border between dreams and reality, where gestures and voices tell a story in search of the answers we've all been looking for.

1. YOUNG AND OLD: Keeping up with the digital revolution

'May you have a strong foundation when the winds of changes shift, may you stay forever young.'

PANELS

Forever young: Survive me if you can

What happens if we live to a hundred years? A longer, healthier life is slowing down the process of aging while the digital revolution is accelerating the rhythm of our lives. Time to think about new options and policy choices: How to adapt the three stages of life – education, work, retirement – to the new reality? How to survive in the age of automation, improving work-life balance and healthcare? How to create fairness between the generations including opportunities for the young and pension rights for the old?

European elections 2019: Count on me, I'll be there!

The first time things can turn magical, funny or serious. First-time voters usually abstain more than older voters, delegating their future to the older generation. Elections are a vital part of democracy. Discover what it's like to vote for the first time in the upcoming European elections. What are your ideas for a high mobilisation among your peers online and in real life? Can we close the 'turnout gap' between young and old voters?

Robots and Artificial Intelligence: The new force awakens

Robots and us: will they become our new assistants making our lives easier – or rivals taking our jobs away? Will they help or replace us? The new force of machine learning and automation will not automatically move in the right direction. We need to make hard political choices: What are your ideas to avoid unemployment and to turn higher productivity into benefits for all? Where will artificial intelligence and machine learning take us? Do we need to update data protection to the reality of an emerging robot economy? Would you trust a self-driving car? What safety rules should Europe roll out for robots on the roads?

I am Dr Robot! What can I do for you?

Medical robots are changing healthcare around the world. Machine learning and computers able to learn from data will be essential to decoding diseases and performing precise surgery in the 21st century. Dr Robot versus Dr Human: Should the European Union promote or stop this technological advance? Europe's humanist values: in the hands of a doctor or in the algorithm of a robot? Will 'machine healing' bring the cold efficiency of the machine age to sick and vulnerable people - or will it complement human touch, experience and empathy?

Schools of tomorrow: Learning for ever-changing times

What's next in education? What set of skills and knowledge will be most useful in the digital era? How can education become a ticket to employment? More vocational learning and practical experience? Can learning be more creative? Which are the top performing countries in the international PISA test – and what can policy-makers all over Europe learn from the 'cleverlands'? What do you propose to boost lifelong learning on-line or in schools and universities?

Ideas lab

Organised by the European Parliament

You take the role of a young advisor to a Member of the European Parliament concerning a project for future legislation. Your ideas set the agenda! To make sure you develop the best ideas, we'll start extra early! In May, you'll be asked to answer a quick online survey to share your views on where you want things to change, and why you want the European Institutions to act. What is going wrong, and why? Then, at the EYE, you'll dive into developing joint answers to these problems. You'll brainstorm in small groups and at the end you'll have the chance to present the most innovative and significant ideas you came up with to an expert of the European Parliament, and get direct feedback!

A cross-generational issue: Does social media integrate or isolate?

Overcoming loneliness is part of life's most fundamental domains: A sense of belonging, love and attachment. For friendship and social contacts there is no firm line between the real and online worlds in the smartphone era. Can social media and online apps

- overexpose teenagers to constant online feedback and idealised images at the expense of real-life friendships,
- reduce loneliness and improve healthcare for older people,
- create innovative ways of mutual support and exchange between generations and start a new intergenerational game of give-and-take?

Tell me about it

Fake news, misinformation and disinformation are some of today's biggest threats to democracy. Providing all audiences with independent news content, exploring new creative formats and tools, and helping the audience to better understand the world around them is crucial for a democratic society. What is the role of the public service media in all this? What new formats and tools can be developed to fight fake news? How do we engage the audience and help them to understand complex stories by telling them in simple ways? How can we produce content that is more relevant and easier to understand for everyone?

Combating fake news: What can we do?

Fake news. You must have heard this term a million times over the past few years. The rise of fake news and misinformation online has taken the media by storm and public authorities are increasingly concerned about the risks it poses to democratic societies and processes. The EU has been taking steps to combat the fake news phenomenon. For example, the European Commission has created a High-Level Expert Group to tackle fake news. But is this enough? What more can be done? Do we need more comprehensive reforms of the way media literacy is taught?

Work, work, work, work...: What's the new way to make a living?

Globalisation, digitalisation, automation: buzz words with a profound impact on the way we work. Technological progress allows for more flexibility. Thanks to our laptops, smartphones and tablets we can work when we want, where we want. But insecurity is also on the rise, in particular when it comes to access to social security and vanishing boundaries between private and professional life. The EU's answer is the European Pillar of Social Rights, but is it enough? Join this interactive session and together we'll come up with ideas on how to embrace the opportunities provided by new forms of work.

Better Life Index: Citizen e-engagement or how to innovate policy-making

How are wellbeing and quality of life measured by governments – and how are they perceived by people around the world? Taking the Better Life Index of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) as a case study, we'll discuss the use of technology as an important channel for public participation. How can policy-makers ensure that those affected most directly by a political decision have a say in it? How can they use digital forms of public participation to inform and include people efficiently and put their needs at the centre of policy-making processes? And how can they improve existing tools to make them more interactive and inclusive, and ultimately more responsive to people's needs?

Growing up in a digital society: What matters most to young people?

Today's young people have grown up in a digital world, but they rarely get a say on what matters most in our digital society and what our priorities should be. Their world has been shaped, and is still being shaped, by others. Instead of being seen as passive objects of others' decisions, young people should be fully included in conversations on their own future. What do you think is the most important issue in our digital society? Join this discussion with experts and policy-makers and come up with solutions to these issues together.

Jobs in the era of digitalisation and automatisisation

The link between technology and employment has long been the subject of heated debate. Various technological developments are now contributing to the fears of a 'jobless future'. But how much of the debate is rooted in facts? How will the structure of the labour market change and how can we manage this transformation effectively? Which jobs are at risk of disappearing and what can be done for people working or training for those jobs? Will digitalisation and automatisisation offer opportunities and not just risks? Join us to find out!

Homo technologicus: How can technology increase political participation?

Young people are increasingly using social media and other technology to establish direct communication between constituents and elected officials. However, the type and quality of their political participation, and therefore its impact on democratisation, varies. How can young people make the best use of technology to engage in political participation and leave their mark on the decision-making process? Can technology provide a platform for new, alternative voices to ensure the diversity of public opinion? Discover how to leverage the potential of technology for political participation.

New coalition scenarios in the digital age

What is the role of political coalitions in the ongoing digitisation of our society and economy? Has technological progress made us more equal or has it made inequalities worse? Are online platforms bringing us together or confining us to our echo chambers? And what is the role of political coalitions in the digital revolution? Are they fulfilling the needs of young people? Are they using the potential of technology to foster dialogue and engagement? Join us to learn about the different experiences of coalitions across Europe and share your opinion!

Changing the narrative: Vocational education and training in the digital age

Since the youth unemployment crisis hit, school-to-work transitions have become more drawn out, with many young Europeans deciding to pursue vocational education and training (VET). Vocational training helps young people to take responsibility early on, improves their employability and equips them with cutting-edge skills. However, many people remain sceptical of the benefits of apprenticeships and work readiness programmes. How can we change our perception of VET students and underrepresented groups in general? Can technology help to raise the appeal and status of VET? Join us to discuss how to change the narrative surrounding VET.

Restless youth: The passions, struggles and contradictions of being young in Europe

What are you fighting for today? Do you think that young people from the past fought for the same causes? Will the next generation fight for similar ones? How do the clothes you wear and the way you cut your hair become acts of rebellion? This hands-on workshop will give you the opportunity to look at the past, present and future generations of young Europeans coming of age at key moments in European history. Ideas developed in this workshop will be used to enrich the development of learning programmes for the second temporary exhibition at the House of European History, a new museum opened in Brussels in 2017, entitled 'Restless Youth'. Join in, put forward your ideas and let's see what we can create together!

Press OK to continue: How digitalisation is affecting our mental health

Technology is changing the way we develop and socialise as young people. In cyberspace, people say and do things that they wouldn't ordinarily say and do in the analogue world. More and more children are facing challenges such as cyberbullying, self-promotion and online communication. What does this mean for our mental health? Do we value it enough or do we favour a digital sense of wellbeing? As digital citizens are we aware of the impact this can have on future generations? How can schools and institutions support a healthy approach to digital tools? Join this discussion to explore the benefits and risks of digital technologies in the mental health sphere.

2. RICH AND POOR: Calling for a fair share leading us away from unity.'*

PANELS

What ever happened to equality: A fair share in the age of globalisation

The key social question of our time: Do globalisation and automation just benefit the 'happy few' or work for all? What are your new ideas and democratic choices to ensure social justice and a fair share of the benefits:

- What is a fair pay for management and for all other employees?
- How could companies share profits from globalisation with workers?
- Which taxes could help to narrow the gap between rich and poor?
- How would you adjust social safety nets to globalisation and automation?
- Where would you invest in jobs and education to reduce youth unemployment?

Trade for all: 'Please fasten your seat belt ...

... we are flying through some turbulence.' A new approach to future trade agreements with partners all over the world: Promise of prosperity – or just new trouble ahead? Should we wave the flag for 'free trade' – or for 'fair trade'? A different bargain for rich and poor countries? How can the European Union:

- build up bargaining power in times of economic power play and improve the art of the trade deal?
- shape globalisation and make it work for all?
- enforce fair trade across the international supply chains? Are voluntary labels sufficient for ethical consumer choices or should we introduce binding legislation for all companies?
- roll out rules to guarantee the respect of human rights and workers' rights everywhere?

Globalisation: In the twilight zone

In this discussion we shed light on the twilight zone of globalisation. It's a secret universe of hidden wealth, clean beaches and dirty money. Secrecy-havens facilitate tax evasion, money-laundering and other criminal activities – and widen the gulf between rich and poor. At the same time some multinational companies avoid paying a fair share of taxes, slipping through legal loopholes in Europe. What should be done now to trace the money and to overcome the twilight economy? Who can take effective action: the European Union or each member state?

Equal opportunities: Forever poor or born to be free?

The gap between rich and poor can be a fact of life, but is unacceptable as a starting point. The equal opportunity to build a better, more educated and prosperous life is at the heart of the European way of life. What can the European Union and the member states do to build a 'ladder of equal opportunities' for all? How would you give children from all social backgrounds a fair chance to move up from the bottom to the top in education? More opportunities for girls by attracting them towards subjects related to the digital era? A new focus on vocational training and social mobility?

Basic income: Return of Robin Hood?

People love the Robin Hood story, because he took from the rich to give to the poor. Do you consider the idea of a basic income without conditions for all ...

Erasmus+ 2020

Are you part of the Erasmus generation? Around nine million people in total have benefited from Erasmus since it was launched in 1987. This year, even more students and young people are expected to receive grants to study and train abroad through the Erasmus+ programme. But how can we make sure that Erasmus+ is inclusive of all young Europeans? Join the discussion and present your ideas on the future of this life-changing programme.

Erasmus+ for younger people

Learning mobility for school students promotes basic life skills and transversal competences, contributing to their personal development, employability and active European citizenship. However, 'pupil mobility' represents a very small portion of the current Erasmus+ programme, in terms of both funding and participation. How can Erasmus+ be made more accessible to people under 18? Join this session to discuss how to improve the Erasmus+ individual pupil mobility scheme and make learning mobility a reality for younger people, too.

The future of work: Tackling the big challenges

The unpredictability of today's labour market is especially challenging for young people as they navigate their first steps in the world of work. Several big trends such as globalisation and digitalisation are transforming the way we work, creating new opportunities, but also bringing many risks. At the same time, high youth unemployment rates still persist, and young people are struggling with long and difficult transitions from the education system, unpaid internships, and the lack of proper working conditions. The power of empowering: Are you ready to take action for displaced young people?

Young asylum-seekers and refugees don't have the same access to education, the labour market and other opportunities as the rest of the population. Their rights are being violated and they have no way to speak out against it. We're already making an important investment to ensure that displaced young people feel included in host communities. Know your worth: Surviving the challenging labour market

Young people struggle to find decent employment and face a variety of challenges as they enter the labour market. But they also have access to learning opportunities in non-formal environments. Today you can learn new skills and test your creativity in many different ways, from activism to taking online classes. But when you're learning in a non-formal way, it can become harder to define what exactly you've learned and how you can communicate it. Join this workshop to find out how you can benefit from a wide range of experiences and how to channel that into better opportunities on the labour market.

50 years of free movement of workers: Where do we want to go?

Can you imagine a European Union without free movement? Can you think of a better symbol of the Union than free movement of people? After 50 years' experience, what does it mean for an individual, a family or a community to move to another country for work? How can we make it easier to become a mobile worker? Join us to explore a vision for the future of Europe.

Workshop

Organised by the European Commission's Directorate-General for Employment, Social Affairs & Inclusion

How do we guarantee the right to work?

The right to work is a fundamental human right, but is it truly recognised as such? Do you have access to a fair job and a dignified work environment? From long working hours to a salary that isn't enough to make ends meet, young people continue to face major employment difficulties. Drop by this workshop to find out more about best practices and ways to improve the European labour market, one young person at a time.

Pay Day: Role-play challenge!

Join in this role-play game where poor players have different starting conditions from rich players. After a group evaluation of these unfair rules, it will be up to you to come up with new rules and solutions to put all players on an equal footing. Now let's play again with the new rules for a more equal society!

Role-play game

Organised by Lycée Charles Poncet, France

Let's play Jenga with welfare systems!

In small teams we'll break down the structure of existing European welfare systems into their different building blocks. Then we'll identify the building blocks that need repairing or replacing. How can we improve them? Or should we add entirely new blocks altogether? Then, with our refurbished building blocks, we'll construct a 'perfect' welfare system. What does it look like? How can we project our findings onto current welfare systems?

Young and homeless: How can EU policies prevent and end youth homelessness?

What is youth homelessness? What are the risks for young people of becoming homeless and living on the streets? Once we've identified housing issues for young people and other risk factors, guided by experts, you'll come up with solutions and proposals. How could they tie into European policy-making?

Let's talk about sex: Why do we need a different sex education?

Have you ever participated in a sex education class at school? Could you talk about it freely? What is the situation in your country? Do you think the current educational framework is sufficient or do you see room for improvement? If so, what should be improved? How can we reconcile differences on this topic and ensure a safe and inclusive learning environment for every young person? Join us and share your ideas.

The bystander approach and the prevention of sexual violence

One in three women in the EU report having experienced some form of physical or sexual abuse. 20% of young women (18-29) in the EU have experienced cyber harassment. Recent protest movements, armed with hashtags such as #MeToo and #BalanceTonPorc, are breaking the culture of silence surrounding sexual violence. But how do we channel this wave of outrage on social media into action? Can we play an active role in preventing sexual violence? Learn about the bystander approach to sexual violence prevention and find out how every individual can take responsibility for solving this widespread problem.

The gender unicorn: Is medicine sexist?

Is there sexism in medicine? Significant gender gaps in research limit how much we know about the difference between women's health and men's. The 'pink tax' that affects millions of young women on any given day – or the additional costs women pay for everyday products – isn't just limited to tampons and razors. Research shows that women, per capita, pay more than men for their healthcare and are often taken less seriously when it comes to pain. Policies requiring the inclusion of women and minorities have brought about some change, but what can we do to close this gender gap further? Discover how to bring gender equality to your healthcare system.

Equal rights: Fighting for social protection and inclusion for all

Discrimination against young people in Europe is rife. And for many young people this discrimination comes in multiple forms – young people with disabilities or belonging to ethnic minorities face multiple barriers to achieving independence. How can the EU provide adequate social protection to young people? How can we ensure that every young person enters adulthood on an equal footing? Join this panel discussion between policy-makers and young people to discuss how to improve the EU's social model.

Not me, we. How inclusive is Europe?

In Europe, 80 million people are at risk of poverty and 14 million young people are not in education, employment or training. This means that not everyone is able to participate fully in political, social and economic life in Europe. Reducing inequalities and promoting inclusiveness are crucial challenges for the future of the European project. How can we reverse inequalities? How can we make our cultural and social diversity a uniting rather than a dividing force? Let's look at the different aspects of growth and assess the inclusiveness of Europe.

The privilege walk

We talk a lot about it on social media, we read about it in research papers and we discuss its nuances with friends and family. It's both individual and collective. We are talking about privilege. Are we aware of our privileges or are they so woven into the mainstream that we cannot see them? How can awareness of our own privilege help us build stronger communities and promote equality in Europe? Participate in this privilege walk as an experiential activity to highlight how people benefit or are marginalised by systems in our society.

My new neighbour: Supporting the integration of refugees

Imagine being a young refugee landing in Europe. For months you haven't had a home to call your own, your siblings have only attended school sporadically and you still think about the violence that drove you from your country. The language barrier might prevent you from making meaningful connections or even knowing where to start in a new country. Refugees have a multitude of hopes and fears as they acclimatise to a new culture – how can communities across Europe make this transition smoother? Are refugees welcomed in your neighbourhood? What more could you do to support the integration of refugees? Join this workshop to learn more.

The truth about the refugee crisis

What do you know about the refugee crisis? What are the real numbers? How fair and equal is the distribution of asylum-seekers between different countries? Which countries are taking on a greater responsibility – the wealthy or the less wealthy? We cannot talk about solutions if we don't know the real scale of the issue. Join us in this game to explore the global distribution of refugees and the wealth of host countries. Debate solutions based on the real situation and not just on myths.

Refugees' health: The 'public health crisis of this century'

Restrictive entry policies have not stopped asylum-seekers, refugees and other migrants from traveling to Europe in search of refuge, protection and a brighter future. However, these policies often force people to take greater risks to reach Europe with negative repercussions on their physical and mental health. The complex health needs of the world's growing refugee population – especially those of young people – pose major challenges for displaced communities, volunteers and national health systems. Join some of the leading experts on refugee health to discover the different dimensions of what has been called the 'public health crisis of this century'.

Promoting better mental health: What can we do?

From your friend in university to your colleague at work, someone close to you is dealing with a mental health issue: an estimated 10-20% of young Europeans are affected. Young people face many challenges in the transition from childhood to adulthood, yet a lack of mental health support is still a reality for far too many young Europeans. How can we promote mental health in Europe? In this workshop we shed light on how to handle stress in a healthy way and seek help when dealing with a mental health issue. If you want to shift the way we perceive and talk about mental health, join us and be part of the change in conversation.

Future of Europe: Comeback of the champion

The European Union – long-term champion of peace and prosperity – has been out of form and punching below its weight for some years. Will it crack under pressure? Or can we make Europe stronger, ready for a comeback, up to the challenges of our time? Where do we really need each other? Where are common solutions most urgent? What should the young generation place at the top of the agenda and push forward? Just muddling through the daily crisis or time for a new level of ambition?

Active citizens: What a time to be alive...

... and to be active – alone and together! Time to take a fresh look at things, time to push for new approaches and long-term solutions. The young generation can start to shake things up, knowing that democracy is not a 'one dance' around the polling station – it's a way of life. How can the European Union and civil society...

... encourage young citizens to make their choices in elections?
... promote pro-social engagement and voluntary work?
... empower young people to take things into their own hands and to participate in social and democratic life?

Brexit: Take a sad song and make it better

Britain leaves the stage – the curtains are closed and many questions open: What is the new relationship status of Brits with Europe: single, complicated, in a relationship? Will Brexit trigger domino effects in other countries and regions – or reforms to revitalise the European Union? Will the older generation pass on to the young a solid 'House of Europe' or a shaky 'House of Cards'? Does the well-being of the kids matter after the political divorce? What should be in a 'Brexit survival kit' – Erasmus, free movement for young people, more essentials?

Open versus closed: Europe and the philosopher's stone

Europeans at a crossroads to the future of the open society, sitting on a philosopher's stone. Which way to go:

- Build a 'Fortress Europe' – or remain open to the world?
- Draw up the bridge – or welcome migrants as new citizens?
- Defend our own social and green standards – or promote liberal world trade?
- Ensure property rights - or advocate for a free and open internet?

Young activists rocking the European Neighbourhood

"Young people these days, they don't care about anything, let alone politics." Aren't we fed up of hearing this mantra a thousand times? Young people around the world face different political challenges. In the context of war, post-conflict setting or oppressive political regime ruling their country, they still want to push for a change. In this case, the struggle for democracy and human rights often stands for taking great personal risks. Their strength, creativity and adaptability are vital for the constriction of more progressive, democratic future of the European Neighbourhood. Plunge into our fishbowl debate and meet young activists who rock the democratic foundations in the Middle East, North Africa and Eastern Partnership regions.

Political parties: What's happened?

Young people are turned off by traditional politics. Membership is in decline and representation is even worse. They've ignored young people and are now feeling the impact, as young people are using new ways to tackle issues and fight for causes they believe in. How can political parties better engage with young people, what's in it for them, and how can they involve new political tools to influence traditional politics?

A YOUrope where everybody's voice counts

Listening to the ideas and wishes of young people should be a priority for policy-makers. And not just listening, but ensuring that young people are the ones setting the agenda for their own future. What issue do you see as a priority for policy-makers? What problems need to be addressed in the coming years? As the EU prepares the next edition of its Youth Strategy, your voice can make a difference. What main issues should the strategy tackle? Pitch your ideas directly to policy-makers. Let them know what you care about.

UN youth resolution: Transforming policy into solutions

You might hear 'youth policy' and think: 'how does that apply to my life'? If youth policies are properly implemented, they can greatly improve the lives of young people. The UN recently adopted a resolution on youth, peace and security to tackle the different issues young people face, such as the lack of political participation and work opportunities. Join us, share your ideas and find out what we can do on a practical level to benefit from this resolution.

Meeting your representatives: What happens next?

Have you ever met your political representative? And if so, did you just shake hands or actually have a meaningful discussion? When politicians interact with young citizens, it needs to be more than a photo op. Politicians should take the time to listen to the worries of young people and discuss possible solutions to the most important issues. And communication shouldn't stop after the meeting. But how can we follow up on the ideas we discussed and find out what has come of them?

Celebrating 10 years of Youth Capitals

'European Youth Capital' is a synonym for a city that is committed to young people and truly seeks to embrace youth participation in decision-making processes. The end of 2018 will mark 10 years since the first city held the title of European Youth Capital. Over the years it has already benefited millions of young people across Europe. Before we celebrate our 10th anniversary, we want to reflect on the work done by Youth Capitals and the impact it has had at local and EU level. We'll also look to the future to think about how the European Youth Capital title can be developed further to achieve even more for young people.

Headstrong school students: A call for better mental health support

The mental health of young people has received increasing attention in the past few years, as it has become clear that depression, anxiety, eating disorders and other mental illnesses are widespread. These illnesses have significant effects on the ability of young people to participate in education and society in general, and can have long-lasting effects on individual health and social and employment life if not addressed early. How can we address mental health issues effectively in our education systems and what can we do to advocate better mental health support?

I WANT YOU (for the European elections 2019)!

The result of the Brexit referendum has proven once again that the older generations make our decisions for us. How can we encourage our fellow young people to take their fate into their own hands and make sure that everyone participates in the European Parliament elections in 2019? Active citizenship goes beyond voting: how can we use social media to convince people our age to play a more active role in democracy? How can we boost the democratic involvement of young people at local, regional, national and EU level?

Lunch with Emily O'Reilly, the European Ombudsman

Would you like to meet the European Ombudsman and find out what she can do for young people? The Ombudsman supports the EU institutions in becoming more transparent, effective and accountable. Emily is the former Irish Ombudsman and an awarded journalist. She will explain what kind of complaints she receives, including from young citizens, as well as her strategic work on how EU decision-making can become more open. We are all affected by EU laws and need to know how our national governments and ministers vote in Brussels. Otherwise, the 'Blame Brussels culture' will continue and harm the European project. Change agents: Empowering minority women to act in local communities

'I raise up my voice – not so that I can shout, but so that those without a voice can be heard. [...] We cannot all succeed when half of us are held back' – Malala Yousafzai. Despite all the talk about equality these days, women – and especially young women from minority communities – are still stereotyped and face discrimination on a daily basis in many different aspects of their lives, from employment opportunities to access to leadership roles. How can they have a voice in society and achieve their full potential? How can they secure leadership roles and have a say in the political decisions affecting them? Youth-friendly cities: Warning – youth zone

Young people use public spaces just as much as anyone else, if not more. And yet all too often young people are not included in the process of placemaking. What do young people want to see in their cities? How can youth spaces become places of creativity, community and social activity? How can public places become platforms for youth civic involvement and urban education? Join this discussion to identify different types of youth spaces and look at their added value in the development of society at large. This activity will include brainstorming sessions, the mapping of youth spaces in Europe and the development of recommendations for policy-makers to make cities youth-friendly.

June kaj kune: Young and together

Have you ever thought about learning Esperanto? Esperanto is a constructed language created by Ludwig Zamenhof in 1887 who had a dream that a common language would help unite people of different backgrounds. Esperanto is designed to be easy and fast to learn, so that it can act as a bridge language between people with different native languages. Considered the most widely spoken constructed language, it enables people to develop the confidence to learn and speak a foreign language. Join an enthusiastic community of Esperanto speakers to learn the basics of this universal language.

Does the media speak our language?

Most media stories about young people are negative. Young people are singled out in the media to create a dramatic, sensationalised stereotype that is often inaccurate. Where are the stories young people care about? Are their voices being heard and disseminated by the media? Is it possible for young people to challenge the way they are represented? Join this discussion to analyse how young people are portrayed in the media and discuss what can be done to improve the current situation.

Back to the future: Learning from the past?

How does it feel to be unwelcome in your home country? To be forced to move to another and lose your home, family and friends? And then to have to find your place in a new environment? 70 years on, these topical questions are answered by four members of the war generation (Generation 'N') from the Czech-German border regions in a documentary demonstrating how 'big policy' influences the lives of 'normal people' – now just as in the 1940s. Meet the 27-year-old filmmaker who created this documentary and rethink your concepts of identity, collective historical memory and stereotypes!

Take your turn to shape the European Citizens' Constitution

What if Europeans had a chance to influence the creation of the Union's constitution? As it would definitely bring the EU closer to its citizens, the Young Europeans - France called a European Youth Convention (EYC) in 2017 whose participants drafted the Citizens' Constitution. Now it is your turn to shape this document. Brainstorm your ideas within three parallel thematic groups with those who worked on the first draft, and present your proposals for the EU's future via YouthMetre e-participation website.

Europe on trial: Who's to blame for the break-up?

In the light of Brexit and the rise of Euroscepticism and populist movements, let's put the EU on trial. Who's to blame for the break-up? Is it nation states, the EU institutions, disillusioned populations, separatists or populist actors? You'll issue a ruling based on arguments from the prosecution, the defence and witnesses invited to testify, suggesting a roadmap to improve the relationship between the EU and its citizens.

The EU and us: Europe wasn't built in a day either

What is 'European identity'? And is there a link between young people and the EU institutions? What role do education and the national media play? And what are the EU success stories that define us? Génération UE's web documentary will give you some inspiration to kick-start the discussion on how to build and understand what unites us. Let's come up with some recommendations for how to reinforce our sense of European identity!

Back to School+: Developing a sense of European identity

Have you ever heard of the Back to School programme developed by the European Commission? This programme sees EU staff head back to their former schools to share their European journey with current students and debate a variety of EU-related topics. The Back to School+ programme is a variant of this, broadening its reach and adding an intergenerational angle: retired EU officials are invited to all types of schools and universities to connect with the younger generation. Come and learn how to invite former EU officials to your schools and universities. Why would you miss this great opportunity to get to know the European project close up?

Corruption index: Why countries fail or prosper

The tentacles of corruption creep into cities and countries across Europe and the globe. Corruption creates massive opportunities in public office for self-enrichment while locking millions of men, women and children into poverty. The level of corruption is not just about money – it’s a key indicator of why states fail or prosper. What does corruption look like and how can we measure it? The corruption index ranks countries from very clean to highly corrupt. What can we learn from the cleanest countries to get things in order? What should the European Union do to tackle corruption?

The DNA revolution: We better talk this over!

The DNA revolution gives scientists the power of rewriting the genetic code in humans, animals and plants. The new technology enables humans to change the code of life. Is access to rights the key to tackling populism?

Ensuring that young people have full access to their rights is an essential element of a culture of democracy, human rights and the rule of law. How can improved access to rights for young people prevent and counter populism in Europe and strengthen the democratic foundations of the European construction process? Youth leaders and experts will present testimonies from individuals who have experienced difficulties in accessing their rights or been denied them altogether. Together we'll discuss how populist movements build on voter disenchantment – especially among young people! – to undermine their rights.

Tolerance is not enough: Break the norm!

When we talk about equality and non-discrimination, we talk about fostering understanding and tolerance for victims of discrimination or abuse. But shouldn't we consider the bigger picture? Discrimination happens when someone doesn't fit into societal norms. Instead of focusing on how to accept those who don't fit in, shouldn't we take a closer look at the norms themselves? Online abuse against women & hate speech: Hindering democracy in Europe?

Is online abuse and online harassment of women, particularly politically active women a threat to democracy? Across Europe we have seen elected politicians, heads of youth organisations, online activists, bloggers, journalists and young women face online abuse. The result is often that women and those from diverse groups choose not to participate in politics, in public leadership, political debates and ultimately refrain from expressing their opinions. We've seen various government interventions in Europe but is this enough? How can we tackle this new challenge to democracy, digital inclusion and progress towards gender equality? The burning question: Should Europe take the lead on climate action?

We only have one planet, and we need to work together to protect it. Scientific evidence gives us a strong sense of urgency to fight against global warming. Ignoring the voice of scientists would only push the risk of climate collapse to the next generation. Should Europe become a clean-energy superpower?

- How to cut greenhouse gas emissions and shift from dirty fossil fuels to clean energy sources?
- How to create more green jobs and a new climate for doing green business to foster renewable power, energy-saving technologies and the circular economy?
- How to speed up electric cars, bicycles and low-carbon mobility on the road to a greener future?
- How to transform mining areas for a post-coal future?
- How to protect rainforests and eco-systems?

Biodiversity and wildlife crime: On safari to extinction

Wildlife crime and habitat loss have pushed many rare animals to the brink of extinction. Crime syndicates are behind the trade in endangered species, operating across continents, without mercy for elephants, rhinos, tigers or gorillas. What can the European Union and the member states contribute to stop criminals and to protect threatened animals? Support park rangers and local communities against poachers? Sustainable city: Global picture, local colour

Protecting the planet: The United Nations outline the big picture in the 'sustainable development goals'. Cities add local colours. That's where the action is to improve life for future generations. Cities play an even more important role in the era of globalisation, offering local solutions to global challenges. What is your model for a sustainable city?

- Better ways to move around the city: New mobility solutions leading to less emissions and cleaner air?
- Better ways to live together: What are your proposals for the well-being of young people and families - cohesion between all generations, affordable housing, safe public spaces, and fitness areas?
- Better ways to work: How would you attract green jobs and foster start-ups with an environmental impact, save resources and avoid waste?

You take the role of a young advisor to a Member of the European Parliament concerning a project for future legislation. Your ideas set the agenda! To make sure you develop the best ideas, we'll start extra early! In May, you'll be asked to answer a quick online survey to share your views on where you want things to change, and why you want the European Institutions to act. What is going wrong, and why? Then, at the EYE, you'll dive into developing joint answers to these problems. You'll brainstorm in small groups and at the end you'll have the chance to present the most innovative and significant ideas you came up with to an expert of the European Parliament, and get direct feedback!

Farm of the future: Do you think cows like robotic milking?

In an ideal world: Sustainable farms produce a wide variety of healthy food, provide a good living for farmers and their families, respect animals and plants and maintain the surrounding nature for future generations. In real life: Current food production is not within the boundaries of the planet. Industrial agriculture as we know it is unsustainable, a dead end. The European Union needs fresh ideas and better solutions. Which is your preferred model for the farm of the future?

- Technological approach: Precise technology including computer controlled watering and fertilising crops. Robots milking the cows and assisting the farmer. A green business, resource-efficient and highly productive.
- Ecological approach: Organic farming, minimising human pressure on animals and plants, including protection of biodiversity around the farm. Animal welfare and animal rights, significantly higher standards for the well-being of farm animals.

Crash course: Learn international sign language

Sign language, gestures and communicative expressions are used all around the world, but it is not so common in Europe to see deaf people using sign language. Sign language helps people build a rapport with one another. A stronger Europe is one built on mutual understanding and communication, but how can we overcome existing barriers in communication? How can we highlight the importance of sign language? How can we make sure that it is recognised and used widely within society? Join us for a crash course in international sign language and be a part of this movement.

The peace spaceship: Challenging prejudice

No matter who we are, we have all experienced stereotypes and prejudice at some point in our lives. The future of Europe will not be white but multi-ethnic, made up of many different cultures, races and nationalities. Migrations and movements of people from all over the world are contributing to a new way to be 'European'. We'll start by playing the peace spaceship game and move on to a discussion on jus soli, jus culturae and the way forward.

SPEAKERS' BIOS

In this year's EYE edition, the floor is almost entirely up to young people. In fact, not only EYE participants, but also the vast majority of all EYE2018 speakers are younger than 30 years! Speakers above this age – mainly Members of the European Parliament and other European decision makers – have been asked to listen («catch») and react to the ideas by all young Europeans present at the EYE, and take them on board in their legislative work after the event.
