Tommaso Padoa-Schioppa remembered at his alma mater

1 February 2011, 4:00pm
Università Bocconi
Aula Magna via Röntgen 1
Milano

Tommaso Padoa-Schioppa (Belluno, 23 July 1940 - Rome, 18 December 2010) dedicated his life to serving Italy and Europe, using his intelligence, vision and ability to build the future.

His commitment to public service energized Italian institutions (Banca d'Italia, CONSOB), European institutions (Commission, ECB), the Italian government (2nd Prodi government) and international foundations (Notre Europe, International Accounting Standards Committee Foundation).

For his fundamental role in the creation of the single currency, he was called the “founding father” of the Euro and the “intellectual impetus” behind its birth.

Tommaso Padoa-Schioppa graduated from Bocconi in Economics and Business Administration in 1966 and was named “Bocconian of the Year” in 1989. He kept close ties to the university, where he loved to return often to share his thoughts on and experiences with economic policy.

We are pleased to invite you to a ceremony in memory of Tommaso Padoa-Schioppa. A tribute at his alma mater by the personalities who were leading the institutions to which he contributed eminently.
