The European Union's Critical Raw Materials Act (CRMA) aims to enhance the continent's sovereignty over raw materials, crucial for its clean energy transition and reindustrialization. This event will discuss the policy options, needs and innovative mechanisms that can help finance the implementation of the CRMA. It will bring together different financial institutions to discuss the financial needs for the CRMA implementation. It will focus on the CRMs needed to electrify the vehicles. It is organized by the Energy Centre of the Jacques Delors Institute, which published two important papers in 2024 on the EU CRMA and France's supply chains: "Strengthening EU green sovereignty through the Critical Raw Materials Act" and "Resilience of critical materials value chains in France: does France have the resources to match its ambitions?".
